Memo

MEMO
To: All Kestrel Foods sales representatives
From: Gloria Fennimore, Regional Sales Director
Date: October 10
Re: Client visit reports

As many of you know, our current system for reporting client visits has caused some confusion. Reports are submitted in different formats, which makes it difficult for managers to compare results across territories.

Effective October 20, every representative must complete the standardized visit report in the KestrelLink app within 24 hours of each meeting. The form asks for the client's name, the products discussed, any samples left, and the expected order volume. A comment field has also been added so that you can note client concerns about matters such as packaging or pricing.

Sales managers will review the reports each Friday and share a summary at the monthly regional meeting. Representatives who have not yet installed the latest version of the app should do so before the 20th. Please contact Arjun Mehta in IT support if you have any trouble logging in.

172. Why was the memo written?

(B) To announce new sales territories
(C) To schedule a regional meeting
(D) To report on recent sales results

(B) The name of the client

(A) record
(B) notice
(C) sign
(D) solve

(D) Contact the IT department

Maritime Museum to Unveil Shipbuilding Exhibit

PORT ELLISON (October 5) — The Port Ellison Maritime Museum will open "Hulls and Hands: Two Centuries of Shipbuilding" on November 1. The exhibit, which runs through March, features a restored nineteenth-century rowboat and a hull-design station where visitors can build a model hull and test it in a water tank.

"We want visitors to understand the skill that went into every vessel built in this harbor," said curator Felipe Andrade. The exhibit is expected to draw large crowds, particularly from local schools.

Guided tours are available for groups of ten or more and must be booked at least two weeks in advance. School groups receive free admission on weekdays; all other groups pay $8 per person.

W They said they can send them on a different truck, but it won't get here until Friday night.
M Friday night? Our stock team leaves at six.

M That should still give me enough time. Will I need to pay anything extra?
W No, the change is free because the cancellation was due to the weather. We're also providing hotel vouchers for passengers who are stuck here overnight.

M About two weeks. During that time, the room will be completely closed, including the refrigerators.
W2 Hmm, a lot of our staff bring their lunch from home. Where will they keep their food?
M Good point. I could rent a couple of portable refrigerators and put them in the conference room on the second floor.

M Hmm, our budget for next year hasn't been approved yet.
W Right, but if we wait, we might lose the date. March is their busiest month.

M I agree. And the parking lot belongs to the building owner, so that's out of our hands, too.
W Then let's focus on the next one. I think it would bring in a lot of office workers who order for meetings.
M I know a Web developer who set up a system like that for a restaurant near my house. I can ask her for a price quote.
W Please do. If it's reasonable, we can launch it before the holiday season.

Studies show that office workers check their inbox more than thirty times a day. Thirty times! My advice is simple. Set two or three fixed times each day to read and answer e-mail, and turn off notifications the rest of the time. I tried this myself last month, and I finished my projects a full day earlier each week.
